A spirit of revolt and challenge is now in the air. Students at present are not what they were two generations ago. A sense of frustration has assailed their minds. They feel that the so-called education does not enable them to face the economic difficulties of the modern world. Hence, they develop a philosophy of pessimism resulting in defiance. Greater emphasis is laid upon political than upon academic interest. What is more harmful is that politicians are exploiting this non academic interest of the students. Naturally they lose their balance of mind. Sometimes they are misled by teacher politicians. But we need not be depressed. Most of the students are yet in their teens. If worthy ideas are put before them by teachers, guardian and other well wishers, there is no reason why student should not become good and useful citizens. What is needed is not an attitude of criticism, but of sympathy and patience on the part of people who have to handle them.
